GENDER, FEMINISM, AND THE BRITISH LEFT, 1944-1991

This collection contains documents compiled by the Communist Party of Great Britain's (CPGB) Women's Department during the period 1944-1991. The records include minutes, agendas, and promotional materials from various women's campaigns, events, and conferences.

They also include copies of Link, the party's women's magazine, and Red Rag, a controversial journal published by the party's more militant feminist members.

Together, these items provide a unique insight into the relationship between Western communism and the women's liberation movement during the post-war era.

The collection is accompanied by 3 contextual essays written by Professor Kevin Morgan, a senior academic at the University of Manchester.
